

EdExchange School Partnership Programme

Form Four students sharing a joke with one of the Linklater lawyers

A group of Form Four students had the opportunity to read and discuss newspaper articles with some native English speakers from the international law firm Linklaters.

Mr Cheung Chi Wai, programme coordinator, said that he thought the scheme gave a valuable opportunity for students to read and think critically. The students, who assumed the roles of legislators, chose a social issue and then collected related articles. Finally they submitted a written report. The most exciting part of the activity was doing an oral presentation in front of the Linklater lawyers.

Linklaters also generously donated funds to purchase some Oxford graded readers for the school library. The programme was organized by EdExchange, a charitable organization established in 2005.

Short Story Reading

Native English speakers coach small groups of junior students short story reading on Thursdays after school. The groups discuss stories and play games to develop their speaking and listening skills. Students said that coaches Jackie and Myra made reading the English stories fun and not difficult at all!

Exciting English stories are also read in Form Class every Thursday by junior students. There is a selection of fiction and non-fiction texts for students of all abilities. Favourite stories can be read again and again to improve fluency. This programme tries to encourage life-long readers of English texts.
